INTRODACTION

Join a unique photography adventure in search of the Iberian lynx — one of the rarest and most endangered wild cats in the world. We'll spend our days in comfortable, well-equipped hides designed for extended observation and photography, with open views for optimal light and image quality. The trip also includes a 4x4 safari through the surrounding mountains to discover the landscapes, wildlife, and plant life of southern Spain.

ABOUT THE WILDLIFE & AREA

The Iberian lynx is a critically endangered wild cat. In 2000, only around 90 individuals remained in the wild, split between two isolated populations: Doñana and Andújar. The Andújar population is particularly important as it holds the greatest genetic diversity in the species — essential for long-term survival. Thanks to ongoing conservation programs, its numbers have increased, but continued efforts remain vital.
